

Powering possibilities

Statkraft

Europe's largest producer of renewable energy

Since all the way back in 1895, Statkraft – fully owned by the Norwegian state – has been making renewable solutions a reality. Today, we do that across 21 countries, producing hydropower, wind and solar power and as a global player in the energy markets.

For our customers, we offer a range of energy solutions – both physical and financial – that can be tailored to your needs. We also develop and operate our own and third-party power plants and market their power output.

From all of this, 100% of our growth is re-invested into renewables, because we're committed to the belief that renewable energy can power every industry, every business, every community, every home.

It can power possibilities.

It can power societies.

Sustainability is embedded in everything we do

We are committed to addressing sustainability at every stage of our value chain.

Climate change

By investing 100% in renewable energy, we are committed to a power pathway compatible with a 1.5°C global warming target.

Human rights

Grounded in supporting a fair and just transition to the net-zero economy, our human rights approach aligns with the international agenda, frameworks and available guidance.

Biodiversity

We are dedicated to responsibly mitigating our impact on biodiversity and continuously advancing the understanding of our footprint.

Circular economy

We strive to reduce our footprint, minimise resource use and are committed to increasing the re-use and recycling of materials.

Once a pioneer, always a pioneer

Clean energy is in our DNA. In fact, it's been that way since 1895 when some intrepid Norwegian pioneers began developing our first hydropower plant. Today, our ambition is to complete one new power plant every nine days from 2025.

You could say that we have always believed in a better kind of power. Power that renews itself, and in turn, renews the world. Power that creates a positive and sustainable future for people, communities, industries, and our environment.

For us, though, pioneering is about more than just producing power. It's about raising standards, showing care for people, society and the planet.

Because once a pioneer, always a pioneer.
